This seminar has been made possible thanks to the Dick and Joan Green family award - architecture heritage talk and the University of Tasmania.

John Wardle will discuss the adaptive reuse and heritage projects of their practice, from the renovation and restoration of Captain Kelly's Cottage on Bruny Island to larger urban projects including 271 Spring Street in Melbourne

Presented by Jamie Wallis is Senior Manager – Market Engagement at the Green Building Council of Australia.

John Wardle Architects is internationally renowned for making extraordinary buildings and places that matter. A team of 90 design professionals work across Australia and internationally from our two studios in Melbourne and Sydney.

Their practice is a large collaborative environment where every project has a range of creative, technical and strategic contributions from a diverse team of architects and interior designers within JWA.

They retain the creative energy of a small studio, pinning work up, and exploring new territory.
